About me:

Lembe Kullamaa is a sociology undergraduate minoring in biology from Estonia. She was diagnosed with Juvenile Idiopathic Arthritis when she was 7 years old. From an early age she has volunteered in Estonian Rheumatism Association and is currently working there on voluntary basis as a youth activities coordinator. Her goal is to create an active support group for young people living with rheumatic diseases.

Lembe is a full-time student in the middle of doing a bachelor's degree hoping to specialise on the sociology of health care. In the long run she wishes to focus on the problems in healthcare systems that young patients face e.g. transition to adult care."
